

He accepted others just the way they are. He didn't try to fix them. Nick was also an amazing listener. A quality that I admired in him. I would vent and he would just listen. Another quality that I admired about Nick was his attention to details. As some of you know, Nick was nearing the end of a major remodel on his ~~home~~ ~~house~~. Every nook and every cranny was thought out well and hard. His contractor, Ron told us that Nick didn't settle for anything less than perfection. Nick will never see the fruits of his labor with his earthly ~~home~~ ~~house~~. But the Bible tells us when Jesus ascended into heaven that he was going to prepare a place for us who believe in him. In that same scripture it goes on to say that there are many mansions in our Father's house (heaven). For me it brings great comfort knowing Nick doesn't just have a ~~home~~ ~~house~~ now he has a mansion. I envision him walking through his

I envision him walking through his new neighborhood - his forever home where the streets are gold and the views are breathtaking and beyond anything he could of imagined.

- There is no more pain and no more suffering for Nick. He is now a citizen of heaven. And his permanent address has changed forever!!
Nick you will be missed!!
